The Governor of Virginia and Mrs. Henry C. Stuart entertained at the second of a series of three informal dances at the Executive Mansion last night. The wide rooms of the historic house of the Governors were hung with Southern smilax, and the mantels in the State drawing-room were banked with fragrant pink blossoms. Baskets of pink snapdragons, sweet peas and Killarney roses were used everywhere, and the piano was draped in pink orchids. In the dining-room the mantel was decorated in tall vases of lilies and white lilacs, and the gown was for the table was formed of lilies of the valley and violets, with a fascinating shower of flowers from the chandelier to the table. The library was arranged with silver bowls and baskets of crimson roses and lilies and the Blue Room, where Governor and Mrs. Stuart received, was arranged throughout in pink roses and lilies, the valley, the mantel being covered with garlands of pink blossoms festooned with rose-colored tulle.

Mrs. Stuart wore a French gown of Nile-green charmeuse with the skirt draped in three puffs and a bodice of real lace and chiffon. The gown was finished with a butterfly bow of green illusion at the back, and she carried a big bouquet of gardenias. Mrs. Charles Dale Carter wore a handsome black velvet gown with a tulle collar, embroidered in rhinestones and silver, and a corsage bouquet of orchids. About 160 guests were invited, and a string orchestra played for the dancing.

Mrs. Stuart was at home to callers yesterday afternoon after a week, and the drawing-rooms were arranged entirely in bright spring flowers and palms. She wore an imported dress of black velvet made with a tucker of Revercomb gave a novelty shower at her home in Covington in honor of Miss Mary L. Chapman, whose engagement to C. A. Stephens was recently announced. The entire lower floor was decorated in pink and white flowers and pink shaded lights, and the place was carried out the same color scheme. Supper from the arch between the parlors was a horn of plenty, from which the gifts were showered on the bride-to-be. The ribbons were pulled by little Misses Elizabeth, Anne, Caroline, Pauline and Dinah Revercomb, who wore white dresses with pink sashes. A number of other presents were drawn into the room by these same little girls in a jiffy. Among the guests present were Mrs. Frank Hammond, Mrs. George Revercomb, Mrs. William Sangster, Mrs. John Wallace, Mrs. Joseph Fudge, Mrs. Jesse McClung, Mrs. J. E. Earning, Mrs. Julian McAllister, Mrs. Edward Crawford, Mrs. A. C. Jones, Mrs. William Wright, Mrs. Buck, Mrs. T. G. Hiron, Mrs. Olin Payne, Mrs. Earhart, Mrs. Edgar Wadell, Mrs. K. N. Entertainment for Mother's Club.

An interesting affair of this evening will take place at 8 o'clock in the Madison School Auditorium for the benefit of the Mother's Club. A well-planned program has been arranged, which includes a vocal solo by Mrs. O. T. Gilliam; piano selection, Miss Bessie Dean Carter; violin solo, Miss Doris Nunnally, accompanied by her little sister, Madeline; baritone, Misses Mariana and Laura Bolton, Blanche Moore and Addie Barfoot; reading, Reed R. Clary; violin, Ed. Skinner; the affair to be concluded with a recitation, Miss M. E. Faison. All interested are cordially invited to attend.

Brilliant Ball.

One of the handsomest functions of the late winter season was the old-time masquerade ball given by the Jefferson Club last night at the Jefferson Club. The ballroom was beautifully decorated for the occasion in garlands of flowers and palms, and hundreds of costumed guests were in attendance. Many novel and unique gowns were worn by the women, and some splendid and original costumes were also worn by the men present.

It was a notable event, and a long list of prominent women acted as patronesses for the ball.

SON OF PRETENDER IS YOUNGEST EXILE

French Territory Barred to Chiefs of Sovereign Dynasties and Direct Heirs.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.
EUROPE'S youngest exile is the three weeks old Prince Louis Napoleon, son of Prince Victor Napoleon, the Bonapartist pretender. The latter, with his wife, Princess Clementine, of Belgium, makes his home at Brussels, and his little boy was born last month.

Article 1 of the law enacted by the national legislature of France, bearing the date of June 23, 1886, explicitly states that French territory is barred, not only to the chiefs of the dynasties that have exercised sovereignty in France, but also to their direct heirs, in order of primogeniture. This has been construed until now to mean the eldest son of the pretenders, but not, if children, their younger brothers.

Thus the Duke of Orleans, chief of the French branch of the house of Bourbon, was already exiled from France during the lifetime of his father, the comte de Paris, who has no children of his marriage with Archduchess Maria Dorothea of Austria, and his next heir is his only brother, Prince Ferdinand of France, Duke of Montpensier.

The latter, who is now in France, free to come and go in France, without let or hindrance, and last year, when he visited Bordeaux and Marseilles on board his steam yacht, Meskong, to add to the local geographical societies on the subject of his country, he was welcomed and entertained not only by the municipal authorities, but also by the prefects or governors of the departments and the generals in military command thereof.

Nor has any objection ever been raised to the visits, or even prolonged residence in France, of General Prince Louis Bonaparte, of the Russian army, only brother of the Bonapartist pretender, and until January 23 last his next heir. But little Prince Louis Napoleon, as the first born son of the Bonapartist pretender, is barred, not only by the law of France, but also by the law of banishment remains on the statute book of France, and as long as the republic continues in existence, will remain barred from French territory, and will never be permitted to see, save from a distance, the land on two separate occasions subject to the sway of his family.

The Russian people seem to be in a fair way towards drinking up their national debt. For, according to Count Sergius Witte, the former Premier, the liquor monopoly, which he has been endeavoring to liquidate, has during the last three years been producing a revenue of $800,000,000 each year, that is to say, within $200,000,000 of the total revenue of the Russian Empire.

Ten years ago the liquor monopoly only yielded half the present amount per annum; and as the figures show a tendency to grow, and to keep pace with the altogether phenomenal increase of the population, it is no little fancy to look forward to the total extinction of the national debt of the Czar's empire by drink.

In other countries drink is regarded as an unmitigated evil, as the greatest producer of pauperism, crime, and of national ruin. Quite the reverse appears to be the case in Russia. No wonder, under the circumstances, that Russian statesmen frown upon temperance movements.

Although St. Peter's, at Rome, as it now exists, was commenced about 500 years ago on the site and foundations of a very much older basilica, so ancient, indeed, that it had become in the fourteenth century little better than a mere ruin, the great cathedral which is the metropolitan church of the entire Roman Catholic denomination, is not yet completed; a fact which I would commend to those worthy brethren who are in New York who are forever fretting over the slowness of the construction of the huge Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on the Morningside Heights of their city, on the banks of the Hudson.

One of the most important duties of the new archbishop of St. Peter's, namely, Cardinal Merry del Val, will be to supervise and direct the work, which is always in progress, towards the completion of this sacred fane. At the present moment the immense pillars of the apse of the basilica are hidden away behind scaffolding, and in a few weeks they will appear for the first time in all the glory of the shining marble for which they have been waiting for centuries. All the pillars of the nave are afterwards covered in the same way, at a cost of $10,000 for each pillar. Meanwhile, the greater part of the marble flooring, which has been worn away by the tread of the faithful, during hundreds of years, is being replaced.

When the pillars have thus been clothed with marble, St. Peter's will be complete, excepting in one detail, namely, the filling of the double row of niches, high up in the walls of the apse, the nave and the transepts. These niches look quite small, and the statues already in their place appear mere statues. Yet these statues, of the finest Carrara marble, are of heroic size, and weigh between two and three tons apiece. They represent the various apostles and saints. There are still many vacant niches, some of them to be occupied in the far future by saints who may have not yet been born.

The Duke of Argyll has decided the Island of Tyree to his nephew, Niall Campbell, next heir to the dukedom and entailed estates. Both the duke and his royal wife, Princess Louise, the artist sister of the late King Edward, are very fond of Niall Campbell, and their object in making Tyree Island over to him at the present juncture is not only to avoid the terribly onerous succession duties which he would have had to pay for the island if he had waited until his succession to the dukedom, but also to render him independent of the executors of his father's will, and of the trustees of his father's property.

The late Lord Archibald Campbell, so long the principal managing partner of the great London banking house of Coutts & Company, left a very large fortune, with a special proviso, disallowing any of his heirs who should become a Roman Catholic. The object of this clause in his will was to prevent his son, Niall, who is extremely high church, from becoming a convert to Roman Catholicism. Now Niall is known to be on the brink of conversion. Perhaps he has already taken the necessary steps in the matter. Indeed, the Duke of Argyll, in transferring Tyree to him, would lead to this belief. If so, he will be able to regard his exclusion from any share in his father's estate with a certain degree of equanimity.

Tyree is an island of the Inner Hebrides, off the coast of Argyllshire, is twelve miles long, nearly five miles wide in its broadest portion, and several lakes, some very fine and well paying grants to which, and the ruins of a very ancient basilica of St. Patrick, as well as of several smaller chapels. The population numbers about 3,000, and, earning their living by the rearing of cattle, by dairies, and by fishing, are devoted to the dual house of Campbell.

Even if Niall Campbell, who is a very clever young fellow, of altogether remarkable musical attainments, with several successful operas, and a number of Scotch songs to his credit, were not to join the Roman Catholic Church, the dukedom of Argyll and its entailed estates seem destined to eventually pass into the hands of members of that creed. For next in the line of succession to Niall is his cousin, Douglas Walter Campbell, married to an American girl, daughter of the late John Laurence, of New York. She is a Roman Catholic, and her boy and girl are being brought up in that faith.

Walter Campbell is a son of the late Lord Walpole Campbell, who was a stockbroker, and spent some time in New York, on Wall Street, connected with a firm there, for the purpose of acquiring a knowledge of American methods of conducting business. Of course, there were lots of jokes made, both in New York and in London, when he became a stockbroker, owing to his being the first son of the aristocracy bearing the title of lord to do so. In New York, for instance, some one chucked up over the entrance door of the brokerage firm with which he was connected the words, "The Lord is with us."

HER EXPERIENCE GAINED ON TRIP
Found That Ladies in State Agreed With Her on One Important Question

Manham, La.—Mrs. Liza Barber, of this town, who has returned from a trip in West and Middle Tennessee, has the following to say: "I have been on a trip in Middle and West Tennessee, where I found many ladies using Cardui, the woman's tonic. While traveling I took great pleasure in telling what it had done for me. I not only praised Cardui, but advised poor suffering women to take it. I know that Cardui cured me, and I believe it will do the same for other women."

Some time ago I could hardly stand on my feet, and I had given up ever having good health. After using two bottles of Cardui I could tell it was helping me, and I continued taking it for awhile. I soon felt as well as I ever did, and could do all of my work.

I shall always praise this great medicine to every suffering woman. I think there is no other half so good."

Mrs. Barber would have found weak, ailing women taking Cardui almost anywhere she could have gone, because Cardui is recognized as the standard woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women back to health and strength in the past 50 years.

Why shouldn't it help you?

Country Home Destroyed.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Charlottesville, Va., February 12.—The handsome country home of D. D. Hunt, located on an extensive tract of land by north of the city, was today destroyed by fire last evening, together with the contents of the second story. The house, which was erected about six years ago by Mr. Hunt on the site of a residence built by his father, was destroyed by fire several years previous. The origin of the fire is a mystery, as the house was heated by a hot-water system. The house was insured by the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., and the loss is estimated at between $10,000 and $12,000.

Tipton Caught in Georgia.

Fridays have been so unlucky that historians have dubbed them "Black" Fridays. The two blackest on record occurred in 1745, in England, and in 1863, in the United States, when Fiske and Gould tried to corner all the gold in the world.

The ground hog evidently knew that it was going to snow on Friday, February 13, and that explains why he buried back to his discount in Capitol Hill so hurriedly on February 2. His prophecy of forty days of bad weather to come is coming true, and all that talk about winter lying in the lap of spring is balderdash. The lap of spring will not appear for at least another thirty days, and it will probably be a little chilly even then. So, first, last and forever, beware!
